PROJECT WORK FOR NEXT YEAR IN VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURE

Advanced enrollment for the Smith-Hughes Vocational Agriculture for next year shows a great amount of interest on the part of the students. Eight new projects have been started and there are several more which will start in a few days. The type of the projects is very high and with proper attention should make a good showing for the students conducting them. The members of the class who are seniors are completing their projects. In only one of two cases have students failed to make a good return for investment and those were due to the fact that they purchased hogs last fall while the market was high and suffered like the rest with the great decrease in price of hogs. All the other projects made good money.
